A RESEO conference

10-12 March 2016

Bristol, United-Kingdom

Practical information

The conference will begin on Thursday, 10 March 2016 at 13.00 and end on Saturday 12 March at 14.00.

Conference registration starts on January 21, 2016 and ends on March 1, 2016.

1. Conference format

RESEO conferences are open to all organisations and individuals, whether they are members of the network or not. They follow a pattern well known to our long-term members, but which it is always useful to describe to our newer participants: in a conference format lasting 2 ½ days, the participants are invited to reflect upon a topic which is of importance to their work, to discover the local situation of the host organisation, to acquire know-how and training via practical workshops, to learn about and be inspired by the presentation of the work and projects done by their European colleagues, and to acquire additional knowledge via researchers' insights.

- Practical workshops

The practical workshops proposed during our conferences are short and specific trainings. They allow participants to experience working methods and learn innovative techniques related to the conference's theme.

Participants are delivered a certificate of participation upon demand.

In Bristol, participants will be invited to participate in 3 workshops (OpenUp Music, a dance workshop by Eric Minh Cuong Castaing, Shonen, and a Musical workshop on digital tablets by Julien Bloit, Les Talens Lyriques) linked with the theme arts and digital media. We are currently working on the workshops' content. A description shall be sent to those registered.

- Case studies

Concrete examples illustrating the conference topic shall be presented by RESEO members in a round table format, followed by discussions.

2. Conference venue

The conference shall take place in Bristol Pays Music's venue, Colston Hall : Colston Hall,

Bristol Plays Music (BPM) is the Music Education Hub for Bristol, the UK's most musical city. It is this year's winner of the Paritor Prize for Creative Music Technology and is shortlisted for the Major Prize at this year's Music Education Awards in February. It is currently working with the National Foundation for Youth Music to radically transform music education by identifying the most excellent, inclusive practice and making it the norm. It's three-year programme 'A New Ambition for Inclusive Excellence' will make the power of music something that every single child can experience regardless of background or circumstance. BPM is unique in that it is the only Music Education Hub to be based at a national concert venue. Colston Hall is the largest concert hall in the South West of England and is renowned for its diverse programme of local, national and international artists spanning classical, electronic, folk, jazz, rock & pop and world music genres. BPM offers all children and young people in the South West access to this incredible range of professional artists in the form of discounted tickets, masterclasses, lectures and Q&A sessions as well as the chance to perform, themselves, in a world-class music venue...It's a musical match made in heaven!
